Pakistan will always be voice of occupied Kashmiri, Palestinian peoples: Munir Akram

NEW YORK: Pakistan will continue to standby the people of Jammu & Kashmir and Palestine until they exercise their right to self-determination, Ambassador Munir Akram said Saturday after hoisting the national flag at the Pakistan House in New York to commemorate the 84th 'Pakistan Day'.

The National Anthem was played as the flag went up the mast at the simple ceremony.

"Pakistan continues to be a strong voice for universal human rights including the right to self-determination of all peoples under foreign occupation, especially the people of Jammu & Kashmir and Palestine,' the ambassador told a distinguished gathering at the event jointly hosted by the Permanent Mission of Pakistan to the United Nations and the Pakistan Consulate General, New York

He said that March 23 represented a milestone in Pakistan's history when Muslims of the sub-continent resolved to establish an independent state of their own under the dynamic leadership of the Quaid-e-Azam

Ambassador Akram said that Pakistan joined the United Nations one month after its independence and ever since has played an active and constructive role in forging friendship and peace and promoting multilateral cooperation in accordance with the UN Charter. ### Aurangzeb to lead ECC after prime minister Shehbaz reshuffles key body

With the reorganisation of the ECC already notified, the body will also include ministers for finance, economic affairs, commerce, power, petroleum and planning, development and special initiatives.

The development comes a day after media reported that the prime minister himself was to chair the ECC and the finance minister would only take his place in the wake of the premier's absence

The prime minister on Saturday constituted six separate cabinet committees on economic coordination, energy, Chinese investment projects, privatisation, State-Owned Enterprises (SOEs) and disposal of legislative cases in terms of Rule 17(2) of Rules of Business 1973.

Pakistan-India detente? MAHEEN SHAFEEQ

rime Minister Shehbaz Sharif's response to Indian Prime Minister Narendra Modi, who in a brief tweet extended his congratulations to Sharif for assuming the post of PM, garnered wide attention. The exchange of political tweets between the leaders of two hostile neighbours was perceived by many as an icebreaker between the two governments after an extended period of no contact. However, it was not significant enough to be assumed as a beginning of a detente. While analysts have argued that Islamabad and New Delhi should adopt an incremental approach towards normalizing diplomatic relations and resuming trade, experts believe it might be a most vexing test.

Both Pakistan and India have clearly expressed their prerequisites for normalization of relations. Pakistan has remained firm over its call for revision of Article 370 of the Indian constitution; this was also part of PM Sharif's election mandate. However, India's stance on A370 has hardened particularly since the Indian Supreme Court verdict on upholding the revocation of Article 370. India considers the subject of Article 370 off the agenda of bilateral ties while Pakistan does not. What appears more concerning for Pakistan is Article 35A of the Indian constitution through which the BJP government aims to inorganically alter the demographics of the disputed region to strengthen its foothold. As long as India disregards the Kashmir dispute, Pakistan will continue to internationalize it. On the other hand, India has often correlated Pakistan with cross-border terrorism and has emphasised zero tolerance over the matter. Unless the new government in Pakistan takes measures to dispel this notion, Indian strategists will continue to raise red flags. These aspects are likely to strain bilateral ties. Moving post-election, the new government in Pakistan would likely start by prioritizing the revival of the economy before considering normalizing ties with India. Also, the weak coalition government in Pakistan has limited power to make decisions on India without all stakeholders on board. On the Indian side, analysts state that the subject of Pakistan is no longer on the table in New Delhi as they believe it to be a high-cost and low-rewarding matter. India's focus has been on securing a seat on the higher table as evident in its ventures such as the latest Agni-V MIRV tests. New Delhi has been fixated on moving beyond the discourse of Pakistan. The BJP's tactics have been to isolate Pakistan regionally as well as globally. India has been bolstering BIMSTEC and the Indian Ocean Rim Association (IORA), while purposefully decaying Saarc as Pakistan is a member. Pakistan also remains off the agenda in New Delhi due to growing anti-Muslim rhetoric under Modi's India.

India is experiencing a unique rise of religious hyper-nationalism under the Hindutva ideology, which the BJP government has openly adopted from the RSS. The Hindutva ideology is a movement for the national reconstruction of Hindustan through the otherization of Muslims, Sikhs, Christians, Dalits, Adivasis and other minorities in India. Over the last decade, the BJP government has systematically introduced measures that limit and suppress the civic and religious freedom of these minorities including through surveillance, harassment, violent mob attacks, demolition of property, detention and ghettoization. Discriminatory laws such as the recently enacted Citizenship (Amendment) Act (CAA) have gathered widespread opposition including from the US State Department and US Commission on International Religious Freedom (USCIRF). Hate speech and misinformation against Muslims has spread like wildfire due to social media. This hate against Muslims has particularly exacerbated during the election seasons as seen during the inauguration of Ram Mandir on the site of the centuries-old Babri Masjid. India Hate Lab (IHL), a Washington-based institution, documented about 668 hate speech events targeting Muslims and inciting violence against Muslims in India. Such a climate of religious hyper-nationalism in India has made it difficult to secure popular support for the normalization of ties with Pakistan. The US Annual Threat Assessment Report 2024 predicted that Islamabad and New Delhi might sustain the present fragile calm in their bilateral ties. While chances of normalization of bilateral ties appear far-fetched, there could probably be two likelihoods for the resumption of dialogue between New Delhi and Islamabad. First, another Sharif government has raised some hopes for improvement of relations with India. This is due to some success in the normalization of ties with India in the past under former PM Nawaz Sharif. Second, PM Modi's possible third term in the government could be an incentive for the BJP to improve ties with Pakistan after the election dust settles. During his third and possibly last term, PM Modi, like previous Indian Prime Ministers, might pursue improving ties with Pakistan to make it part of his legacy. Even if such a measure is taken by India, experts have questioned its sustainability. Any hostility in the region could prove to be highly detrimental, which is also predicted by the U.S. Annual Threat Assessment Report 2024. This demonstrates that the two governments might experience a tug-of-war between the restoration of ties and the surrendering of their principled positions.

In a situation like this, it remains to be seen if New Delhi and Islamabad will be able to hat options does an ordinary man have in this country to find redress for the wrongs he suffers in his daily existence? For anyone who has observed the situation that exists on the ground, the answer is obvious. An ordinary man's struggle for survival is a story of epic proportions, in a tragic sense

Essentially, it is denial of justice and dignity at every step of the way. The remedy, perhaps, is comprehensive social change. That is what the revolutionaries want to achieve by overthrowing the existing state. But can the man on the street do it on his own? And that too with a brick in his hand?

If this is a bit confusing, let me put it straight. Newly inducted Chief Minister of Khyber Pakhtunkhwa Ali Amin Gandapur has exhorted the people to hit any officer who asks for a bribe with a brick, ostensibly drawing blood. These words of wisdom were uttered by the PTI leader in a fiery speech delivered on Wednesday in a village in D I Khan. Gandapur asked the people not to come to him to complain about officials who demand bribes. Hit them with a brick. Simple. If the children of any of them protest, tell them that you have saved their father from going to hell.

Saying it with bricks

There should be no doubt about the meaning of the message the chief minister had delivered. He was asking the people to take the law into their hands and indulge in vigilantism. But consider the irony that he himself embodies law enforcement in his province.

A clip of Gandapur's hot-blooded remarks was shown on some channels and circulated on social media. I read a report on the site of BBC Urdu about questions that were raised by the netizens. How can the chief minister of a province advise people to resort to violence against any official?

If the PTI supporters want to rationalize this reckless transgression on the part of a leader chosen for the only post of authority that the party now has - as they have done in the case of their leaders' and activists' unlimited indiscretions - the excuse is that fighting corruption is the central plank of the party.

This does make a lot of sense. Corruption is the enemy we need to defeat. But this battle is not to be fought at the level of a common man's isolated encounter with authority.

The truth is that it is the official who holds both, the law and the brick, in his hands. It is essentially the powerlessness of the maltreated citizen that breeds the social injustice of Pakistani society.

Besides, any campaign against corruption should begin at the top and that, rightly, is also the PTI's stance. Incidentally, there have been charges of corruption in high places during the former provincial regimes of the party. Opposition will always do that. However, senior PTI leader Sher Afzal Marwat has admitted that corruption was rampant in his party's previous government in KP.

Coming back to what I said at the outset, it is the common man's plight that is generally not ddressed in Pakistan. It is not possible, not in KP and not in any other province, for a wronged citizen to hit an official with a brick or even grab him by the collar. But the powerlessness of the dispossessed is still expressed in some manner and they do take law into their own hands.

I am referring to how the mob on the streets of Karachi has repeatedly lynched people suspected of being muggers and robbers. The frequency with which this happens is alarming. It has almost become a matter of routine, to the extent that the news of another such incident is just not considered important.

For example, a suspected robber was lynched by an angry mob in the Korangi neighbourhood of Karachi on Tuesday. One report that I read on the city page of a Karachi daily covered just over an inch of the column. "The suspect died on the spot", it neatly concluded.

This is how we deal with human stories of potentially great magnitude. In addition, nothing happens as a follow-up. Do they talk about these societal aberrations when they sit on the high table of authority in the citadel of power? Is the state of the society, in the context of its disequilibrium, of any concern for them? As an aside, street crime and crime in general tend to rise during Ramazan. More than usual, people are seen to be losing their cool. It appears that instances of road rage also increase. I wonder if Gandapur's angry outburst can also be put in this category.

Finally, I want to refer to another incident of this week that I think is also a reflection of the state of our society, though it will be hard to fully explore its genesis and its implications. Let us not do that and just paraphrase the published report. And I want to keep it brief.

In Dera Ismail Khan, an additional sessions judge has handed a death sentence to two girl students of a seminary and life imprisonment to another for "slaughtering" their young teacher for allegedly committing blasphemy. According to a police report, the three students of a madrassah had murdered a young female teacher two years ago.

To quote from one published report 'In the initial statement given to the police, the arrested students said that one of their fellow students had told them about her dream that the teacher had committed blasphemy and her killer would be given the glad tidings of paradise"

Knives and sticks were recovered from the three students. The report said that the tortured and slaughtered body of the teacher was found lying in the street.

According to the World Air Quality Report published on Tuesday, Pak istan was the second most polluted country in 2023. But we have other kinds of pollution that cannot be measured by scientific instruments.

History of Pakistan

Pakistan Movement

Main articles: Pakistan Movement and Indian independence movement

Further information: Two Nation Theory

Important leaders in the Muslim League highlighted that Pakistan would be a "New Madinah", in other words the second Islamic state established after the Prophet Muhammad's creation of an Islamic state of Madinah which was later developed into Rashidun Caliphate. Pakistan was popularly envisaged as an Islamic utopia, a successor to the defunct Islamic Caliphate and a leader and protector of the entire Islamic world. Islamic scholars debated over whether it was possible for the proposed Pakistan to truly become an Islamic state.[2][3] Another motive and reason behind the Pakistan Movement and Two Nation Theory is the ideology of pre-partition Muslims and leaders of Muslim League including Muhammad Ali Jinnah and Allama Iqbal is that, to re-establish the Muslim rule in South Asia. Once Jinnah said in his speech:

The Pakistan Movement started when the first Muslim (Muhammad bin Qasim) put his foot on the soil of Sindh, the gateway of Islam in India.[4][5]

That is why Jinnah is considered the "great Muslim ruler" in the Indian subcontinent after Emperor Aurangzeb by Pakistanis.[6] This is also the reason that the Pakistani government's official chronology declares that the foundation of Pakistan was laid in 712 AD[1] by debate among Muslims over the creation of a separate homeland.[3] The All India Azad Muslim Conference represented nationalist Muslims who, in April 1940, gathered in Delhi to voice their support for a united India.[7] Its members included several Islamic organisations in India, as well as 1400 nationalist Muslim delegates.[8][9] The Deobandis and their ulema, who were led by Husain Ahmad Madani, were opposed to the creation of Pakistan and the twonation theory, instead promulgating composite nationalism and Hindu-Muslim unity.

According to them Muslims and Hindus could be one nation and Muslims were only a nation of themselves in the religious sense and not in the territorial sense.[10][11][12] Some Deobandis such as Ashraf Ali Thanwi, Mufti Muhammad Shafi and Shabbir Ahmad Usmani dissented from the position of Jamiat Ulema-e-Hind and were supportive of the Muslim League's demand to create a separate homeland for Muslims.[13][14] Many Barelvis and their ulema,[15] though not all Barelvis and Barelvi ulema,[16] supported the creation of Pakistan.[17] The proseparatist Muslim League mobilized pirs and Sunni scholars to demonstrate that their view that India's Muslim masses wanted a separate country was in the majority, in their eyes.[14] Those Barelvis who supported the creation of a separate Muslim homeland in colonial India believed that any co-operation with Hindus would be counter productive.[18]

Muslims who were living in provinces where they were demographically a minority, such as the United Provinces where the Muslim League enjoyed popular support,[19] were assured by Jinnah that they could remain in India, migrate to Pakistan or continue living in India but as Pakistani citizens. The Muslim League had also proposed the hostage population theory.

find a middle ground or even opt to catch some low-hanging fruit in a limited space. With this, it also remains to be seen if the two governments will revisit outstanding issues such as the dismissal of trade or the downgrade of diplomatic relations. Experts have stated that any effort for resumption of dialogue or normalization of relations would need to be a mutual effort in the absence of which it will be another era of diplomatic freeze.

Tech Elite Russian hackers targeting German politicians, Google warns

Elite hackers tied to Russian intelligence last month targeted several German political parties with an eye toward burrowing into their networks and stealing data, according to an alert released by Germany's cybersecurity agency and security researchers working for Google owner Alphabet.

In a report published on Friday, Alphabet's Mandiant cyber unit said it had caught the hacking group known as APT29, which is alleged by Western intelligence to act on behalf of Russia's SVR foreign spy agency, trying to trick "key German political figures' into opening an email masquerading as an invitation to a March 1 dinner event hosted by the Christian Democratic Union (CDU), Germany's center-right political party. An alert circulated by Germany's BSI cyber agency and reviewed by Reuters referred to the same incident, saying that state-backed cyber spies were targeting German political parties in an effort to build long-term access and exfiltrate data.

In a statement, the CDU said it had long been exposed to digital attacks from domestic and foreign actors. "In this case, too, we received very prompt information about the attack. the statement said. "There was no official CDU dinner on 1 March, the event was fictitious." The alert did not give further details on who was believed to be responsible and neither it nor Mandiant provided details on who specifically was targeted. Reuters

Jack Black reveals 4th instalment of Kung Fu Panda might be 'last'

Comedian Jack Black made a revelation about the Kung Fu Panda franchise's future

Comedian Jack Black, who has voiced the famous Po the panda since 2008 recently revealed that Kung Fu Panda 4 might be the "last Kung Fu Panda. Ever." Speaking to The Sunday Times, Black made a revelation about the franchise's future

He said: "For me, I think this is the farewell. This is the last Kung Fu Panda. Ever."

It's been over two decades since Black voiced the first instalment, with DreamWorks Animation first announcing him in the role.

The School of Rock star shared his experience on one of the most highlyacclaimed franchises of all time, noting: "I'm just thrilled that it turned out so great, because when you start these things you always have the hopes and the dreams that it's going to be amazing and that you're going to entertain people, but it's never a given, you never really know until you see it." "Making movies is hard, so to make a really good one that captures people's imaginations and gives them a great night at the theatre feels like magic, and it definitely feels that way right now," he added.

The film's latest instalment enjoyed the biggest opening weekend in the U.S. earlier this month, setting a new record since its original debut.

For the unversed, Kung Fu Panda has established its name as one of the most successful animated franchises in history

Pancreatic cancer symptoms include loss of appetite, belly pain, dark coloured urine, jaundice, and weight loss

This new medicine can treat types of pancreatic cancer

In a scientific breakthrough, a new medicine has been approved by the United States Foods and Drug administration (FDA) that can treat types of pancreatic cancer, Fox News reported.

Onivyde (irinotecan liposome) is the first medicine in nearly a decade that can treat the aggressive illness that has an average life expectancy of only eight to 11 months.

The drug was approved after a controlled trial was conducted on 770 patients with metastatic pancreatic adenocarcinoma and who had not previously received any chemotherapy.

The patients were injected with the new regimen which includes Onivyde, oxaliplatin, fluorouracil and leucovorin. According to the results, the patients showed "significant improvements in survival rates and response rates".

Dr Zev Wainberg, professor of medicine and codirector of the UCLA GI Oncology Program in Los Angeles, said, "I am hopeful that this regimen represents a new reference, meaning we will add to this in the future." However, Dr Marc Siegel, clinical professor of medicine at NYU Langone Medical Center, said that although "the drug is a useful new tool, it is not a game-changer.

Pancreatic cancer is the eighth most common type of cancer in females and tenth most common in males. Its symptoms include loss of appetite, belly pain, dark coloured urine, jaundice, and weight loss.

Administrator USAID Samantha Power conferred Hilal-e-Quaid-i-Azam on National Day of Pakistan

Ambassador Masood Khan says we will never forget her humanitarian services at a time when we needed them the most

WASHINGTON: "The efforts by Ms. (Samantha Jane) Power are reflection of her commitment to assist people of Pakistan and forge a strong and deep partnership between Pakistan and the US." "In recognition of her outstanding contribution towards strengthening Pakistan-U.S. relations, the President of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan is pleased to confer upon Ms. Samantha Power, Hilal-e-Quaid-i-Azam (Civil)," stated the citation that was read on the occasion while awarding USAID Administrator with the national award.

Ms. Power is serving as the 19th Administrator of the United States Agency for International Development (USAID) since May 2021. She is proponent of strong Pakistan-US cooperation in humanitarian and socioeconomic sectors like health, education and climate change and promoting people to people exchanges. "As USAID administrator, she was instrumental in provision of significant life-saving US humanitarian assistance to mitigate the disastrous impacts of the floods in 2022," the citation said.

Thanking the people of Pakistan for the award, Samantha Power in her vide message said that the award was a testament to the enduring partnership between USAID and the Pakistani people. In a hearttouching message she recalled the devastation when one third of Pakistan was inundated due to biblical floods in 2022. "I will never forget visiting Pakistan in September of 2022. Flying over the floods, feeling sure that I was flying over an ocean, only to be reminded that the ocean was in fact hundreds of miles away. And there were entire towns submerged under the seemingly infinite expanse of water below," Ms. Power stated in her statement. She highlighted the support from the highest levels of the White House and both houses of the US Congress that facilitated an assistance of $215 million to the flood affected people. She also highlighted the support from private American citizens and American companies who rallied to Pakistan's aid, donating more than $37 million to support the relief efforts.

'Our mission is helping the people of Pakistan to improve water management systems, build markets for Climate Smart Agriculture technologies and techniques and mobilized climate adaptation finance under the US-Pakistan green Alliance initiative," Ms. Power said. "We remain committed to standing with Pakistan as it continues the long and difficult recovery from the floods while building a more resilient and more prosperous future," she added.

Congratulating Ms. Power on receiving national award of Pakistan, Pakistan's Ambassador to the United States Sardar Muhammad Masood Khan said that Ms. Power is a true friend of the people of Pakistan. We will never forget her humanitarian services at a time when we needed them the most. SABAH

Save Gaza Campaign demands decisive action from the Govt of Pakistan for the Palestinian cause

Calls for an immediate global intervention & heightened pressure for an immediate ceasefire

ISLAMABAD: The world watches on, as the men, women and children of Gaza make it to 170 days of siege at the hands of the illegal occupier and apartheid regime of Israel. Weaponized starvation, air raids, sexual assault, and burtal murder of children continues to unfold before our very eyes, reaching us through our hand-held smartphones as the first ever genocide to be broadcast continues to worsen in the holy month of Ramadan.

The patron-in-chief of the Save Gaza Campaign former senator Mushtaq Ahmed Khan led the protest and sit-in at the D-Chowk on Sunday. Chairperson Defense of Human Rights Pakistan Amina Masood Janjua along with the workers of the organization attended the protest and sit-in.

We are shocked and appalled at the response or lack thereof, of the Government of Pakistan to take action to force Israel to, at the very least, an immediate ceasefire. We urge the government to take decisive action to:

Call for an immediate global intervention and heightened pressure for an immediate ceasefire.

Establish a formal team to join South Africa in the prosecution of Israel for crimes against humanity in the International Court of Justice.

Initiate proceedings on Israel's war crimes in the Organization of Islamic Cooperation (OIC).

Undertake piplomatic demarche with the ambassadors of the United States, Great Britain, the United Arab Emirates, Egypt, and the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia.

Facilitate ground and sea routes for humanitarian aid, including the dispatch of a naval fleet to deliver substantial quantities of food, medicine, and essential supplies. While the afterglow of Pakistan Day, March 23 still infuses us with the spirit of readiness, strength and courage, we must consider with gratitude the place that our military might affords us on the world stage. We must use this very gratitude to remind ourselves of the objectives of the charter of the Organization of Islamic Cooperation (OIC), which states that the aim of this organization is, "to support and empower the Palestinian people to exercise their right to selfdetermination and establish their sovereign State with Al-Quds Al-Sharif as its capital, while safeguarding its historic and Islamic character as well as the Holy places therein"

It is time to read the writing on the wall, and to lean on the unique geo-political position of the sovereign state of Pakistan and unite the people nationally and internationally to compel Israel towards a peaceful and just solution to this horrific problem that threatens to destabilize the entire Muslim world, SABAH
