ISLAMABAD: Foreign Office spokesperson Mumtaz Zahra Baloch on Thursday strongly condemning the recent attack on the Iranian consulate in Syria said the Israeli "adventurism" in the region was unacceptable. The Foreign Office spokesperson, in her weekly press briefing, said Israel must be held accountable for its irresponsible attack for its unabated atrocities in Gaza as well as the attack in an already volatile region. "Israel's adventurism in the region reached a new height with its irresponsible attack this week on the consular section of the Iranian Embassy in Damascus, Syria. The attack is a violation of the UN Charter, international law, and Conventions," she remarked. She said over the past six months, Israeli authorities had been involved in cross and systematic violations of international humanitarian law by repeatedly targeting UNRWA, humanitarian relief organisations, and unarmed civilians. "The deliberate targeting of a humanitarian convoy bringing food to people facing famine is a serious violation of international humanitarian law."

Condemning the Israeli attacks on humanitarian convoys in Gaza, she called for international accountability of Israel for its crimes besides seeking "immediate, full. and effective" implementation of the provisional orders of the International Court of Justice. "We also reiterate our call for the full and expeditious implementation of the UN Security Council Resolution 2728, adopted on 25th of March, leading to a permanent ceasefire, lifting of all barriers to the provision of humanitarian assistance, and ensuring protection of civilians throughout the Gaza Strip," the spokesperson commented.

She also condemned Thursday's terrorist attack in the cities of Rask and Chabahar in Iran's southeastern province of Sistan and Baluchestan, and conveyed Pakistan's solidarity with the government and people of Iran. Mentioning the ongoing visit of a high-level Iranian delegation to Pakistan, she said both countries had "re-engaged and re-established" all communication channels as existed before January this year. She said the government and the people of Pakistan looked forward to the visit of Iranian President Ebrahim Raisi's visit to their country.

Discussing the terrorist attack in Bisham that had killed Chinese nationals, the spokesperson said the law enforcement agencies were probing the incident and reiterated Pakistan's commitment to fighting terrorism. She said the projects being executed by Chinese firms faced a temporary freeze following the terrorist attack but the work was resumed following the security audit. To a question, she reiterated that Pakistan would not hold any talks with TTP and expected the Afghan interim government to take action against the militant groups or forces involved in carrying out terror activities inside Pakistan. About the repatriation of illegal foreign nationals, the spokesperson said the policy was not Afghan-specific rather it featured the repatriation of all foreign nationals illegally staying in Pakistan. She said a limited number of oreigners were deported as the majority had returned voluntarily. She said there was no change in Pakistan's one-visa policy as all foreigners coming to Pakistan should carry valid passports and visas. She told the media that Secretary of National Security Division Wagar Ahmed visited Astana, Kazakhstan to attend the 19th meeting of the Secretaries of the Security Council of the Shanghai Cooperation Organization (SCO) which discussed the strategic security issues affecting the SCO member states with a focus on terrorism, extremism, human and transnational crimes. ## Why NATO's 75th birthday is a troubled one

ANDREW HAMMOND

ATO on Thursday marked the 75th anniversary of the signing of its founding treaty, yet the mood music is far from celebratory. Key leaders within the military alliance are increasingly concerned that the bloc is facing its biggest ever chal-L N lenges. For example, Polish Prime Minister Donald Tusk, a former European Council president, last week warned that Europe is in a dangerous new "prewar era." He asserted that Ukraine must not be defeated by Russia for the good not just of NATO members but all those who value the post-1945 rules-based order. Tusk said that war is "no longer a concept from the past," that "it's real and it started" and "literally any scenario is possible.'

This is one reason NATO is reportedly drawing up plans to secure a five-year military aid package of up to $100 billion. The so-called Mission for Ukraine proposal is being shepherded by Secretary-General Jens Stoltenberg for final approval over the summer, ahead of November's US presidential election. The plan would allow NATO to manage the supply of weapons to Ukraine for the first time since Russia began its attack in February 2022. The reason for the urgency is that Tusk and other leaders have warned that the next few months of the conflict will "decide everything," given the urgent need for the West to help Ukraine rearm. The Polish PM said: "We are living in the most critical moment since the end of the Second World War." What Tusk is highlighting is the growing concern in key NATO nations that, absent a significant shift, the tide is turning in the Ukraine war in Russia's favor. Moreover, any outcome that could be perceived as a major victory for Moscow would significantly add to the threat environment facing other nations in Europe

It is in this somber context that NATO is planning for the next half-decade, with a change of leadership anticipated in the second half of this year. The person widely anticipated to become the next secretary-general of the military alliance is long-standing Dutch Prime Minister Mark Rutte. The good news for the next NATO chief is that the context for the debate about the alliance's future has been transformed in the post-COVID-19 period. Only five years ago, there was widespread concern about NATO's purpose, with French President Emmanuel Macron saying that it was experiencing "brain death." Macron's remarkable outburst was driven by what he saw as a rapidly changing geopolitical landscape. This included the US' diminished commitment to NATO under the Trump presidency.

Fast forward to today and Macron has said that Russia's invasion of Ukraine woke NATO up with the "worst of electroshocks," even though big questions remain about its future. It is an unexpected turnaround of fortunes, in the most serious of circumstances, that could also be fueled by Western concerns about China. The Ukraine conflict has underlined the continuing relevance of NATO, with its collective member state population of about 1 billion. For all its remaining weaknesses, it remains one of the world's most successful ever military alliances and has helped underpin the longest period of sustained peace in the West's modern history. While this is positive, NATO could, however, face a major internal challenge from November if Trump wins a new term. Former Trump administration officials, including ex-National Security Adviser John Bolton, have confirmed that the former president came close to announcing the US' withdrawal from NATO during his first term. For instance, Trump threw the alliance's 2018 summit into disarray by threatening to pull the US out.

Despite the strength of the other NATO members, there is no question that America's withdrawal would be a body blow to its credibility. Trump, who originally described Russia's invasion of Ukraine as "genius," may also have plans to try to warm ties with Moscow, as was his intent in his first term. Behind the scenes, there is much scenario planning going on regarding the feasibility of NATO without US participation. It is possible that the Western alliance could try to keep the military organization functioning for a few years in the hope that the successor to any second Trump presidency might bring Washington back into the fold. In the meantime, Rutte and other Western leaders assert in public that the best way for Europe to prepare for any change of incumbent in the White House is to increase defense spending. It is important, therefore, to see all member nations in Europe now commit to meeting the target of spending 2 percent of gross domestic product on defense. In 2024, 20 NATO members are expected to do so, up from just three in 2014. Some, including Poland, have gone much further and now spend some 4 percent of GDP on defense

If other nations move in the direction that Poland is heading, there may well be a possibility for intra-alliance harmony with the US. Here, it is the combination of Russian military assertiveness, instability in the Middle East and Africa and Trump's uncertain commitment srael's excessive violence against Palestinian targets in Gaza is steadily undermining the support it has long enjoyed among the American public, especially among young people, who generally rely more heavily on social media for their news and information than the largely biased US media. Separate surveys by the Pew Research Center and the Associated Press-NORC Center for Public Affairs Research show this trending shift away from supporting Israel. Israel still enjoys significant support in America, but the results of these surveys reflect a significant generational divide, with younger Americans questioning Israel's actions while older Americans continue to embrace blind loyalty to the nation founded on Palestinian lands in 1948.

Although the mainstream media depicts the conflict as being the result of the violent assault by Hamas militants on Oct. 7, calling it terrorism, social media videos and reporting frames this attack as a response to Israel's long history of anti-Palestinian violence.

Claims regarding the Oct. 7 violence that were reported without verification by the mainstream media have been challenged on social media, with many people questioning the allegations of rapes and horrific violence against babies originally made by pro-Israel military sources.

Younger Americans are also seeing videos of heavily armed Israeli soldiers laughing and celebrating as they shoot and kill unarmed Palestinian civilians as they walk on destroyed Gazan roads. One video, which has been widely viewed and shared on TikTok and X, shows four Videos posted online also show Israeli soldiers beating and brutalizing women and children and razing mosques, hospitals, schools, homes and businesses in Gaza. The number of fatalities has risen to about 31,000, but many believe the real figure to be even higher, as Israel prohibits foreign journalists from entering Gaza to cover the conflict. Meanwhile, the Committee to Protect Journalists reports that 103 media workers have been killed in Israeli strikes.

Israel has always enjoyed unquestioning political support from American governments. US support also includes hundreds of billions of dollars in funds, nearly unrestricted access to American weaponry and protection at the UN Security Council. Since Oct. 7, Washington has vetoed three resolutions calling for a humanitarian ceasefire in Gaza. It finally abstained on a fourth resolution last month in the face of a growing anti-President Joe Biden voter movement called #AbandonBiden. The erosion of support among young Americans is one reason, maybe the primary reason, Israel's political supporters introduced and last month passed legislation in Congress that threatens to ban TikTok. The proposed law faces a tougher fight in the Senate. It must pass through the upper house and be signed off by

Not surprisingly, attitudes among younger Americans are impacted by social media and are changing, showing growing support for Pales-tinian rights and less support for Israel. That erosion is less obvious among older Americans, surveys show The Brookings Institution in November cited a pre-Oct. 7 Pew survey, which showed the significance of the generation gap in America in terms of attitude toward Israel. That poll showed 55 percent of Americans held a favorable view of Israel, while 41 percent had an unfavorable view. More significantly, only 41 percent of Americans aged 18 to 29 had a favorable view, compared to 69 percent of over-65s. Polling released this week by Pew further highlights that shift, with younger Americans generally opposed to military aid to Israel. Only 16 percent of adults under 30 favor the US providing military aid to Israel to help in its war on Gaza, compared with 56 percent of those aged 65 and older.

The poll also shows that 34 percent of younger Americans say Hamas reasons for fighting Israel are valid while 30 percent say they are not The remaining 35 percent say they are unsure - a significant crack in Israel's domination of the American public.

Older Americans are less likely to see Hamas' reasons for fighting as valid and far more likely to see them as not valid, the Pew survey shows For example, nearly two-thirds (64 percent) of 65-plus Americans say Hamas' reasons are not valid.

The Pew research reflects similar findings by others. An AP-NORC center poll released in February showed that half of American adults believe Israel has "gone too far" in Gaza.

The shift from the beginning of Israel's war in 2023 to early 2024 is also reflected among Republicans By late January, 33 percent of Repub licans said Israel had gone too far, up from only 18 percent. Similar shifts took place among independents Democrats and all US adults, according to the AP-NORC poll.

A change in Americans' view on the Israeli-Palestinian conflict would result in more pressure on Tel Aviv to accept genuine peace with the Palestinians. But to make this happen, people throughout the world will have to do a better job of coun tering the pro-Israel propaganda in America.

It will not be easy to undo the brainwashing Americans have long experienced at the hands of the pro-Israel lobby, but it is necessary to achieve a genuine and lasting solution to the conflict.

His party in the East Pakistan Parliament threatened to leave the state of Pakistan. Suhrawardy also verbally authorised the leasing the Inter-Services Intelligence's (ISI) secret installation at Peshawar Air Station to the CIA to conduct operations in the Soviet Union.[85]

In the longer term, it is also plausible that such higher defense spending will be locked in by NATO concerns about wider shifts in the global security environment, including threats from China. What is perceived as Beijing's increasing international assertiveness is a growing concern in the West and this will become especially significant if Xi Jinping continues to consolidate his strategic partnership with the newly reelected Vladimir Putin.

Apple's 'next big thing' are home robots?

Apple is currently working on a venture into household robots, which might become the company's "next big thing" after the Vision Pro headset and having abandoned its decades-long effort to develop a self-driving electric automobile.

The company's AI and machine-learning team and hardware engineering division are allegedly collaborating on the prospective new device.

Marc Gurman of Bloomberg stated that Apple engineers are thinking of creating a mobile robot that can follow customers around the house, citing people with knowledge of the project.

According to The Guardian, Apple announced a 2% increase in sales at the end of the previous year, ending a four-quarter

3 meals for better mental health

Mental health can be improved by consuming nutritional diet

Our physical and emotional well-being are entirely dependent on the food we eat.

According to research, those who consume a diet high in fruits, vegetables, seafood, and whole grains are actually 25% to 35% less likely to suffer from depression than persons who follow a Western diet, which is high in fat, sugar, and ultra-processed foods. "Many people don't realise the link between food and mental well-being," said Signe Svanfeldt, lead nutritionist at Lifesum. "A nutritious, balanced diet positively impacts our energy and mood, as well as our gut microbiota, which influences our mental wellbeing," she added. Following are three essential diet nutrients needed for a good mental health, according to Yahoo Life.

Broccoli, spinach, carrots, quinoa, brown rice, beans, lentils, and chickpeas are examples of prebiotic foods.

According to Svanfeldt, probiotics and prebiotics help lower inflammation, which raises serotonin levels in the body, a neurotransmitter that controls mood and lessens signs of stress and anxiety. Other diets contain Omega-3 foods, which include walnuts, salmon, trout, tuna, chia seeds, hemp seeds, and flaxseed

Omega-3s are good fats that have been demonstrated to lessen brain inflammation that has been connected to mood problems. As a result, they may aid in enhancing well-being, as per Svanfeldt

Additionally, foods high in polyphenols include peppers, red cabbage, spinach, walnuts, hazel-nuts, kiwi fruit, and red cabbage.

"Polyphenols promote healthy blood flow to the brain and can protect it from oxidative stress and inflammation," Svanfeldt said. "This may affect mental health, by reducing depressive symptoms and increasing overall mental wellbeing.

The Seminar was aimed at creating awareness on tariff rationalization for Trade bodies and associations, exporters, and public sector stakeholders from Ministry of Industries and Production, Federal Board of Revenue, National Tariff Commission, Ministry of Finance, and Board of Investment among others.

The seminar was also attended by representatives by the key chambers of commerce and industry, product associations and sector specialists from all over Pakistan. In his keynote address, the Federal Minister for Commerce, Mr. Jam Kamal termed the tariff rationalization process as a critical function of the government to enhance trade competitiveness and foster economic growth.

He said the government will further improve the economic environment for confidence building of businessmen and industrialists and priorities and measures have been initiated in this regard.

He stated that by simplifying and streamlining tariff structure, the Ministry of Commerce aims to reduce costs for domestic industries, boost exports and attract foreign investment.

The Secretary Commerce, Saleh Ahmed Farouqi highlighted that the Pre-budget seminar was organized to provide a platform for stakeholders for engaging in a meaningful discourse on the benefits and implications of tariff rationalization.

He informed the participants that the pre-budget exercise was an opportunity for stakeholders to gain insights into the tariff rationalization initiatives, learn their impact on various sectors and provide inputs to aid the process of making strategic changes to the existing tariff structure.

Every year around February, a comprehensive drive is run by the Tariff Wing at the Ministry of Commerce to invite budget proposals on a specific format from stakeholders across the country.

The call for proposals along with the prescribed format is available at the website of Ministry of Commerce.

Through the Pre-Budget Seminar, participants learned how they can provide feedback and recommendations to policymakers on tariff structure and rationalization measures. INP

Shahid Khaqan Abbasi lauds China's help to Pakistan through BRI, CPEC

BELJING: Former prime minister Shahid Khaqan Abbasi stressed the importance of building a closer China-Pakistan community with a shared future, as he condemned a terror attack that killed some Chinese workers in his country last week.

Describing the March 26 attack that claimed the lives of five Chinese workers in Pakistan's Khyber Pakhtunkhwa Province as a very sad incident, Abbasi denounced the attack and said his country is committed to protecting Chinese nationals working in the country.

In an interview with China Daily in Boao, Hainan province, Abbasi lauded China's help to Pakistan through the Belt and Road Initiative and the flagship China-Pakistan Economic Corridor, or CPEC, project, saying he finds China's engagement and the way the Chinese system works fascinating.

BRI projects are "basically left to the host country to decide what to do", said Abbasi, who recently took on a new role as a member of the board of directors of the Boao Forum for Asia. He said the Chinese side's framework for the CPEC had only two requirements: projects should be economically viable, and they should be environmentally sustainable. According to him, CPEC projects have been developed at an amazing speed in the past decade. Now, the focus is shifting to high-quality BRI. INP
